Presidents' Team

South began to edge toward the end of the half but was unable to score. Under returned Lee's kick-off from the ten to the 20. Nichols went for five before Lee tackled him. Thomas, on the next play, made a Lima first down. The Tigers were then given a 15 yard penalty. Baughman carried the ball for a Lima first down to the 35. From there they attempted a pass but Russell intercepted and ran to the Harding 35 just as the gun sounded ending the half at 6:05.

During the half both the Lima and Harding bands played. The Lima band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the Harding band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "The Star-Spangled Banner".

Lima kicked to Harding to open the third period and the ball went into the end zone for an automatic touchdown giving Harding the ball on their own 20. The Presidents fumbled on the next play and the Tigers recovered. Nichols was forced to punt as Taylor to England and the extra point was added putting Lima ahead 13-0. Harding received but lost possession of the ball. South began to drive starting from the Harding 32.

They scored when Thomas nabbed a pass in the end zone. Lima added their extra point placing them in a 20-0 lead. After Harding received the teams traded possession of the ball. With the ball on the Lima 42 in the Prexies possession, Richie picked up a yard followed by a completed 27 yard pass from Taylor to England on the following play. Ag 8 the try for conversion failed and the score stood Lima South 20-Harding 12. The Tigers came bounding right back. They returned the kickoff to their own 37. Nichols picked up a pair of yards before Baum and Noll's smothered him. Baughman went to the Harding 46 for a first down with Houdy sweeping him off his feet. Nichols tried the left side of the Prexie line but Noll met him for no gain. Nichols again took the ball and carried it to the Harding 38.

Richie made a grand opening of the final stanza as he raved to the two yard line. On the next play the Prexies were stopped about one foot shy of the goal line, however, Taylor drove over the goal line. Taylor's drive was interrupted by a Lima 26. From that point Dick Taylor lost a pass to Bud

On the next play Lima picked up four yards and from there Nichols broke through to score the final touchdown of the contest. The try for the extra point was no good and Lima South led 26-12. Harding returned the kickoff to their own 41 but could not rack up a first down and relinquished the ball to the visitors who kept it for the remaining few

SNATCHES OF SPORTS

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Ramon [Name] today announced that he will be elected American Association president.

Make Schemer, the Giants' young first sacker, is working hard to get back into the line of play after missing the last game.

After Colorado's second year team scored three touchdowns against Utah last week and was holding a 13-0 lead, Coach Frank [Name] sent back the first stringers late in the game.

New York World-Telegram line on Cardinal pitcher Max Lanier discharge from the Army. "Too much, too late!"

Army Air Force officers explain that the order for Charlie [Name] discharge may have come because he "is not in a critical category."

Richwood absorbed a 19 to 0 setback at the hands of Marysville yesterday on their own field. The visitors tallied in the first five minutes on a line thrust and another touchdown in the same period after a series of plays brought the ball close to the goal line.

Three other games find the powerful Philadelphia Eagles turning loose their backfield array at Detroit, Washington and Pittsburgh, and the Chicago Cardinals unable to triumph in their last 29 starts, battling their city rivals, the Chicago Bears. The Cards have added players almost daily during the last week in hopes of ending their long adverse streak.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ABLE GARRISON

FOR the fraction of a second there was no word of comment from any one of the quartet to whom my father had just announced his startling decision. I was sure that Jack, Katharine and Dicky were so genuinely surprised as to slow their speech, and while a conjecture concerning this possible decision of my father's had come to me, I had dismissed it as fantastic, and my reaction was also one of surprise.

Characteristically, Dicky was the first to break the silence. Thrusting his hands high above his head in an enthusiastic gesture of approval, he "broadened" from his wheel chair.

"By my halidom, Pore!" he exclaimed. "That's the best news I've heard in many a long day! When the coastalls of our Georges finally disappear through the outer doors of the Lansfield, never to return, the gusty sighs of your humble servant will be heard from the Break to the Battery."

Jack looked at him with bright, quizzical eyes.

"I don't know the whys and the wherefores of all this, but if this mysterious gent affects you this way, he must be some baby!"

He hasn't been casting covetous eyes in Madge's direction has he?" The ludicrous query made us all laugh, except my father, and the grave, almost disapproving expression of his eyes, brought us back to immediate attention.

"I had forgotten, Jack," he said. "that you do not cutaclysmic And your loss is not cataclysmic—he smiled grimly—"although he is a brave, brilliant, generous young man, going on a mission of great peril. But I must ask Marjaret—or, rather, Richard, he can do the subject greater justice—to explain why Georges, in this hotel, has not even a 'husant value' and why I wish to take him down to the highway immediately."

He paused, and my irrepressible husband chuckled audibly. "If you don't interm him in a lock-proof room down there, Dad," he said in slightly confused explanation, "what a field day there'll be when he and Carolyn begin sending out charm rays in each other's direction!"

My father's smile was a bit frosty, but nevertheless, I was relieved to see, held grim amusement.

Won't Intern Him

"I don't intend to intern him," he said. "I shall instruct 'Mr. K' to give him the run of the house, except, of course, your room, mine, and those which house any secrets. Georges can be trusted not to divulge to Carolyn, or Helena—the smiled again—any of his own secrets, and anything she may happen to tell him, unintentionally, concerning her stepfather, will also be safe with Georges."

"Carolyn knows very little of her step-father's affairs," he went on, "and I am quite counting on Georges' presence in the hideaway to keep her so occupied that she will send all her curiosity in his direction."

"Trying to find out what makes him tick?" Dicky ejaculated with another chuckle. "You old fox!" he added, with the affectionate irreverence he occasionally uses to my father, and which I know the elder man secretly enjoys. "You ought to be given an Indian name, 'Chief Wise Fox.'"

Even my father joined in the laughter which greeted this saley. But his lips closed and tightened immediately afterward, and his eyebrows contracted. All four of us, who have been with him in so many emergencies, knew that signal, and there were no more smiles or frivolous comments.

"What about that disguise of Jack's, Richard?" my father asked. "Is it ruined, or will you be able to fix up Georges' face so he will pass muster going out of the hotel? His present appearance is known only to a wai r or two and a couple of elevator men, and I am sure his presence here is unsuspected by his enemies, so that any ordinary disguise will be sufficient. What do you think? Will you need any outside assistance?"

Stomach Ulcers

Ulcer of the stomach and first part of the bowel is known as peptic ulcer. It does not always require hospital treatment nor even that the patient remain at rest. According to Doctor T. Grier Miller of the University of Pennsylvania, if there are no complications present, patients with this disorder may be up and about during treatment, but to get best results they must cooperate in every way.

Ulcer of the stomach is a condition which tends to recur, but if the treatment is continued, these recurrences may, in a measure, be prevented.

In ulcer there usually are attacks of pain which come on from one to three hours after meals to the stomach and vomiting. The pain is usually located in the pit of the stomach.

The treatment consists in regulation of the diet, good habits of physical and mental relaxation and the avoidance of emotional upsets. Alkaline substances taken internally under the doctor's directions are also helpful.

The diet is made up of frequent meals of soft or liquid foods, such as milk and cream, gelatin, cream soups, pureed vegetables, crackers and butter, cream cheese, eggs and custards. For some patients, meat and fish, except pork, may be included when properly cooked, that is, roasted, baked, or broiled.

The foods should be taken every two hours, five or six times a day if possible. If not, there may be three or four meals a day with milk and alkaline substances given between meals. If necessary, vitamin preparations and those containing iron may be prescribed. Some patients can take fruit juices while others cannot. Just before bedtime, food or alkali should be employed, and the alkali should be at hand for use during the night if the patient awakens because of pain.

Certain sedative or quieting drugs may be employed to promote relaxation and sleep. The most satisfactory ones, according to Doctor Miller, are the barbiturates. Of the alkaline substances he prefers aluminum trisilicate or magnesium hydroxide.

When the symptoms of the ulcer disappear, the X-ray shows that the ulcer has healed the patient must be warned to continue with the diet of the non-irritating foods and to take milk or some alkaline substance between meals and at bedtime. He also should make sure that he gets enough sleep and rest and does not overdo or become emotionally upset.

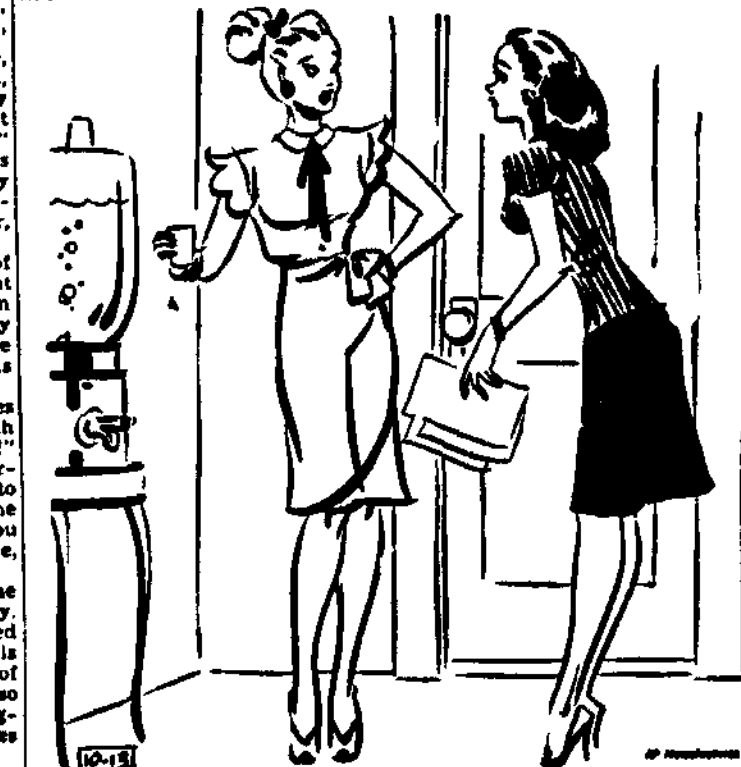

Ulcers have a tendency to recur, particularly in the spring and fall. Hence, it is a good idea to have examinations made at these times, including an X-ray of the stomach and bowel. In other words, ulcers can only be successfully already making plans for temporary repair of the bridge. At the same time he was having charges under the undamaged part of the bridge so he was ready to blow it as soon as the Eleventh got blown if the Japs got to the river before the lines.

Arthur Orders Bataan Move

At that point I got in touch with my Alcalá head and ordered it moved back to Bamban, a short way south of Fort Stotsenburg. I told my operations signal officer and a few enlisted men to wait for me.

A Different Christmas Eve

ached Alcalá on the evening of December 24. Christmas Eve always was something of an event around here in the good days, and now I found my mind back over those memories of a Christmas tree, the present of our boy's toys, the carefully wrapped gifts for my wife, and all the things that go with Christmas on that night.

I got in touch by phone with Necker at RCA in Manila. He was closing up. The city had been declared a one. But he was kind enough to get through to me to Adele.

I remember it because it was the last time I was wireless her directly for three awful years.

I was hot, dirty and hungry from the day's fighting and traveling. But the food which my quarters commandant was supposed to send up from Manila upon his arrival there failed to come. We went without that night without dinner.

On Christmas morning, 1941, a tank officer came on skeletonized headquarters and gave us a Christmas present. It was a can of beans. Our little force, consisting of Col. Frank Nelson and Josh Stansell, split up. It was Christmas breakfast, lunch and dinner, as was our Christmas Eve dinner—and was mightily appreciated.

Withdrawal Toward Bataan

My withdrawal plan toward Bataan was divided into three phases, designated as D1, D2, D3, D4 and D5. D1 called for a withdrawal to a line along Urdaneta, Angeles and Aguilera, about midway between the base of Lingayen Gulf and the Agno. D2 was a line behind Agno. D3 reached from San Jose to Santa Ignacia through Gerona, 16 miles farther south. D4 reached from Cabantuan through Zaragoza, Lo Paz and to the high ground west of Tarlac. D5 stretched across the broad valley leading down from Lingayen to the mountains to the east.

It was unlike any of the textbook retreats I had read at the War College and at Leavenworth. It differed from the retreat of Gen. McDowell's Army from First Battle of Bull Run in that that had been a retreat. Nor was it like Pope's retreat after the Second Battle of Bull Run, or Lee's withdrawal from Gettysburg.

In these classic retreats the object was to get away from the enemy by speed of movement. Moving down toward Bataan we had the definite mission of delaying the enemy as long as practicable, not only to permit Jones' South Luzon force to clear around Manila and get into Bataan, but also to enable Maj. General M. Parker to prepare our Bataan defenses for our more withdrawal than retreat, withdrawal with delaying actions all the way. But even that hurt deeply. It was hard for an American to get used to.

Withdrawal Schedule

Withdrawal to Line D1 was to be completed on the night of December 23-24; D2 on the night of December 24-25; D3 the next night; D4 the night of the 27th-28th and D5 two nights later, the last two withdrawals subject to cancellation in case we could hold those D4 and D5 lines.

We completed withdrawals D1, D2 and D5 without incident, but the Japs hit us heavily at D4, especially at Cabantuan on our right flank. The Ninety-First division took the brunt of the Jap tanks, cavalry and infantry and gave ground to Capan, 10 miles south of Cabantuan. Late the same evening, December 29, the Ninety-First division attacked again and was routed. Our buses, loaded to their ceilings, hauled the survivors 20 miles farther south where the division commander rallied what was left of his force.

My right flank was in such peril that I immediately ordered a general withdrawal to D6, the Bamban line, on the night of December 30-31. That night Bonnet and about 1,000 troops of the Twelfth and Thirtieth Infantry regiments, trapped up the Kennon road two weeks before, rejoined us and were placed with the Eleventh division along the D5 line.

The Ninety-First was reformed east and south of the Pampanga river, but for some reason which I have never been able to fathom MacArthur's headquarters directed that I was not to employ the Ninety-First's artillery units. I therewith ordered the Ninety-First's artillery to withdraw at once to Bataan.

Japs Attempt Entrapment

The South Luzon force, withdrawing northward toward San Fernando Pampanga to reach the only road down which it could travel to Bataan, had to cross the Pampanga river by means of the Calumpit bridge to reach San Fernando Pampanga and the homestretch of the escape road to Bataan. The bridge was a serious bottleneck. The Japs knew it and started for it, bent upon trapping a large part of the South Luzon force.

We had to protect that bridge, and San Fernando Pampanga. With the 500 men left of the Ninety-First division, plus a regiment of the Seventy-First division and a battalion of field artillery, I took a position along the Pampanga river north of Calumpit at 11 o'clock on the night of December 30, while the South Luzon force moved as quickly as possible over the bridge and through San Fernando Pampanga. During the night a company of the One Hundred and Ninety-Second Tank battalion was added to this defense.

At 10:30 on the morning of December 31 the Japs attacked. The Ninety-First, somewhat reinforced held its position all day in sharp fighting, while Gen. Jones' South Luzon men ran what amounted to a gauntlet. By midnight the majority of Gen. Jones' men were safely through San Fernando Pampanga, protected by the successful stand of the Eleventh and Twenty-First divisions north of the town.

Start of Fateful Year

I welcomed in the dreary new year of 1942, which was to see us fall and become the victims of barbarous captivity, by ordering the plucky Ninety-First to begin its own withdrawal over the Calumpit bridge and to be done with it before daylight.

I was at the bridge at dawn as the last elements of the Ninety-First division crossed. The last truck, one of the civilian ones I had earlier commandeered, stopped at the edge of the bridge and reported to me that it had been fired upon by a Japanese patrol at a crossroad about 500 yards away. I adjusted my field glasses and in the early light of the morning I could see the enemy patrol, the tip of the Jap advance guard, coming at us.

Blow it! I told Col. Skerry

with delaying actions all the way. But even that hurt deeply. It was hard for an American to get used to.

He serves as state senator from the district which includes Morrow county. He served as chaplain in World War I and is a former minister of the Methodist Protestant and Congregational churches.

The program, which will begin at 3 p. m. will include music by the high school band, and various other musical presentations. Invocation will be given by Rev. L. C. Florstedt. The speaker will be introduced by J. J. Fout, who was in the company in which Chaplain Shurtz served.

Approximately 300 names are included in alphabetical arrangement on the honor roll. The frame for the list was constructed of

A Rousing Cheer For The City Firemen

The firemen of our city deserve a rousing cheer. These "Soldiers on the Home Front" stand guard many a weary hour in order that our homes and businesses may be protected against disaster. They must always be alert, ready, and fast when the call comes. Many a home has been saved from complete destruction because of the speed with which they arrived. Yes, we think our firemen are pretty swell and we want them to know how much we appreciate their efforts.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our Mom, Lula Hammon Smith, who was called to the Great Beyond Oct. 14, 1944.

It seems such a long time, dear Mother,
Since God called you to rest,
And with all our deep sorrows
We know He works out all things for the best.

But whenever we mingle together,
Our pleasures to share,
And we think of your absence,
It seems such a hard cross to bear.

And we feel so very sure,
With every breath of air,
That never on this earth
Can we fill your vacant chair.

And we've dreamed so many, many times
It would be so wonderfully soon,
If you could wait us from above
Some of your kind and loving advice.

Sometimes when we're burdened
And choose the wrong mind,
If you could just be with us in spirit,
It would help lighten our load.

But we can only pray to God, day by day,
When we are away from home,
To guide us in every way,
To keep us from sinning again.

God bless your soul,
And may you rest in peace.

Power and New Apparatus for Industry To Result: Some Phases of Work Still Secret

By HOWARD W. BLAKELER The report of Dr. H. D. ...

Assisted Press Science Editor

CAK RIDGE, Tenn., Oct. 16.—The atomic bomb's potential to replace its $100,000,000 per year wartime power test processes and apparatus for security and study of the secret stage of some fundamental scientific discovery.

When Nobel prizes are given for atomic science concerned with the bomb, scientists are given men who have been mentioned because their work cannot be judged of without great reservations. This restriction has covers parents and testimony.

More than a thousand scientists participated in the atomic bomb project. Their individual names

IN QUEST DRIVE

21 Named in Women's Division of County War Fund Campaign.

The list of workers in the campaign to raise $20,000 to finance the county's share in the National War Chest and support the work of agencies comprising the Marion Community Council, Inc., comes to 21. The names are reported to the campaign headquarters in the Foundation's office. Twenty-one women make up additional teams working with the women's division in a general search for funds.

There, was one of the purest wizards of the bomb. He smelted research only. Colleagues say he has few peers in his life.

L. R. Oppenheimer, another scientist, founded the University of California, headed the Los Alamos N. M. plant and laboratories and made the bombs.

Harold C. Urey of Columbia discovered of heavy hydrogen and water, was another double game man, in administration and science. He was a leading chemist, worked at Columbia in the gaseous diffusion process for getting uranium 235, which resulted in the giant of all the plants.

University Flared Part

A. R. Compton, University of Chicago, one of the great physicists, did an administrative ation, headed by Mrs. Carl Danner. The list includes the following:

Mrs. Earl Andrews, Mrs. W. E. S. Brown, Mrs. B. C. Galloway, Mrs. Harold Brown, Mrs. Ruth Wright, Mrs. L. A. Ake, Mrs. Mary Goss, Mrs. C. M. Kraft, Mrs. J. E. STRICKEN SUDDENLY

Lakewood Man Taken Ill at Daughter's Home Here.

Harry K. Lowensohn, 64, of Lakewood, O., died Friday night at 9 o'clock in city hospital following a heart attack suffered two days ago. He and his wife were visiting at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Howard Griffith

But who knew what was going on in Germany? They tried to interest the government.

The other is L. J. Briggs, head of the U. S. bureau of standards. After the scientists had made their first report that prospect of anything useful in the power or bomb for Nazis was looked doubtful, Dr. Briggs was influential in obtaining further study and finally the decision was not only could a bomb be made but that there were four likely methods.

(Next—Project was a heart-breaker for accountants.)

CHOCOLATE MAKER DIES

By The Associated Press

MERSHEY, Pa., Oct. 13.—Milton S. Hershey, who made a fortune of millions in chocolate and cocoa and gave it away to orphan boys, died today in a Hershey hospital in this central Pennsylvania town he founded in a cornfield in 1909. He was 88.

His death was a heavy blow to the total number of firms under the department's jurisdiction would rise to 34 next year.

He reported the Portage fair, given up in 1928 when fair buildings at Ravenna were destroyed by fire, would start comeback for its 100th anniversary.

The department also is preparing holding the state fair, postponed since 1931 because of the depression, to be held in its former site, simply de-
